

Pussy obstructs the streets.

The Broadway cars blocked, and Police Captain Williams sent for.

A white cat peeped out of a footman's boot in the show window at 1201 Broadway on Saturday afternoon, and, after taking a leisurely survey of the store, turned her head around sedately toward the street. A dozen people had already gathered to see what she was doing and what she was going to do. She stared at them three seconds with twinkling eyes, yawned, stuck out a long red tongue at them, and disappeared down the boot leg like a flash of lightning. Men stretched their necks up to try and look down the boot leg after her. She hadn't gone far. She peeped again, stuck up her head, facing toward the interior of the store, turned it slowly to face the crowd, stared at them a second, yawned, stuck out her tongue, and disappeared. Then she did it again. About the twelfth time a big policeman pushed his way into the store.

"The cat must get out of the window," he said to Mr. Upton, President of the Rochester Lamp Company.

"The cat is obstructing the streets. The street cars are blocked. If you don't take the cat away I'll arrest you."

He went in and said Mr. Upton, who began to say that the said policeman was capable of joking.

The policeman said he did mean it, and walked out.

The cat sat in the window. Every time she faced the street she puffed in 500 faces—woman's face, boy's face, banker's face, bazaar face, Yankee, Irish, German, Italian, French, English, etc., the faces of men with men, baton peddlers, labor reformers, carriage customers, clergymen, District Telegraph boys, a hairy corporation man, the State Auditor, a car driver, truck drivers, ex-chamber drivers, Alderman, actors, hotel keepers, barkeepers, cup keepers, etc., all looking at her. The cat had 600 grins blazed into the shop window and a roar of laughter came in at the door.

Some of the theatre men who had heard about the police action began to hear about Mr. Upton. The manager of the Comedy Theatre wanted to buy her to set her on the stage. Mr. E. A. Drew, who keeps the stage open, was asked by Mr. Gilson and other property owners in the vicinity to drop into the shop and volunteered to go half the price. No one said the cat fired, and it may or may not have been accidental. McLaughlin's son and daughter were in Newark.

"That cat must get out," he said.

"You can't take the cat out," said Mr. Upton. "You can't take you out, though," said the Captain.

"What are you going to do with me?"

"We'll find a way."

"The policeman is on the street to make people move on; are they not?"

"Can't keep a policeman there on purpose to prevent me from getting out?"

Mr. Upton said he would take the cat out of the window for the night because he didn't want to be arrested on Saturday night, but he would not sit at home all night. He would put the cat back on Monday. He took pass out of the window, much to the grief of the assembled property owners and chamber carriers.

Pass out in the window again.

The footman's boot was set on a side counter in the interior of the store instead, and pussy peeped out from the boot leg again. She yawned, stuck up her fresh, hot round-up occasionally with a brass key. She goes by clock work. Mr. Upton said that his lawyer had told him that there was no law against it.

"There is an electrical toy that represents a policeman clutching," the salesman said, "and every time it clings, hits the window pane and makes a noise. Look at it. You know, don't try to stop him from clapping. Why should they sit down on pussy. I'd like to know!"

DEEGAN HELD FOR PERJURY.

His Attempt to swear Sweeney Out of a Murder Not a Success.

The trial of Alexander Sweeney, who is jointly indicted with Peter Smith for the murder of Watchman Hannan at the East Thirty-eighth street pier, was concluded yesterday. Senator Cullen and other friends sat near the prisoner, whose brother is Roundman Sweeney, and who has a brother-in-law on the Thirty-fifth street police. Assistant District Attorney Purdy recited Andrew Deegan, a brass finisher, of 538 East Thirty-sixth street, who testified for the defense on Friday. In substance, Deegan's testimony was that he visited Hannan in Bellevue Hospital on April 8, 9, and 10, and conversed with him to the purpose of informing his mother, Mrs. Kate Brown, he was accompanied by a man named Smith, who has since died. Hannan, Sweeney said, was the last to see him.

Deegan, the lesser, shot me. Alex Sweeney didn't have anything to do with it. I know they want to hold me, but I don't get somebody to get him off the score."

When asked, on cross-examination, how he got into the hospital without a doctor, Deegan testified that he went through his life insurance with Dr. Standish, the known kidnapper. He also denied that he, Deegan, had ever been arrested for any offense.

Now Deegan is committed to stand trial on the charge of perjury, and he is here to a transcript of your testimony on Friday, he said. It and see whether you want to stick to it."

"I do," replied Deegan.

"So I don't care if Mr. Purdy said, 'but don't dare to leave the court room.'

Deegan, looking very uncomfortable, took a seat near the prisoners' box. The Mr. Purdy said he was not satisfied with Deegan's testimony that Deegan was at no time at her son's bedside when she was there, and Capt. Standish of Bellevue Hospital, who denied that he and Deegan had been in the same room. Then Major Mary Brosin, Hannan's stepmother, testified that on the 9th or 10th of April she met Deegan at the gate of the hospital, and that he was anxious to see him, but that he could not gain admission. Mr. Purdy next proved by the record that Deegan was at the hospital on April 10, 11, and 12, on Wall's Island three times for disorderly conduct, and that he had been sentenced to the penitentiary for a year and a day. Mr. Purdy moved that Deegan be committed to stand trial on the charge of perjury.

Judge Recorder Smyth granted the motion, and Capt. Standish, the lesser, ordered Deegan and locked him in the jury room.

The case will be given to the jury to-day.

THOUGHT HER HUSBAND MURDERED.

Mrs. Rogers Left Home on Wednesday, and is Found Crazy on Sunday.

A fantastically dressed woman, who was evidently insane, was found wandering in Greenwich street by a policeman on Sunday afternoon. She said that she was Mrs. Sophie Rogers, widow of a physician, who had lived at 400 West Thirty-eighth street. She was removed to Bellevue Hospital, and, as her insanity was apparently due to drink, was placed in the infirmary.

The Richmond flats are at 400 West Thirty-eighth street, and inquiry there yesterday discovered that Mrs. Rogers had not died, and that the individual had just served him with a process paper.

The service was held at the First Baptist Church on Franklin street, Port Richmond, Staten Island.
